See :

Is this your first time in our city? This basic walk (— 4 km / 1 hour) will take you to the highlights of Ghent. When will you come back?

Old Fish Market 1	This building is situated on the spot where the Lys and Lieve rivers split up. Here you will find the tourist information office of Ghent.
Castle Of The Counts 2	The pride of Ghent, that could only be taken by one army: students protesting against rising beer prices.
Great Butchers' Hall 3	This is where meat was sold, but it was a product reserved for the wealthy. The entrails were sold to the poor in the small adjoining shops, called "penshuisjes".
Lena, Nestor & Luna 5	Brussels has 1, Ghent has 3! In Kraanlei you can find a bronze Manneke Pis, accompanied by 2 Girls Pis: Lena & Luna. Legends abound.
House Of Alijn 6	At the very place where the Alijn family once founded a hospital, you can now find a museum about daily life in the 20th century.
Big Cannon 14	This Big Cannon has a rather sad history. It may look powerful but in reality, it has never been fired.
Vrijdagmarkt 15	The inhabitants of Ghent come to the market here on Fridays, hence the name "Vrijdagmarkt". Jacob Van Artevelde keeps an eye on everything from his pedestal.
St James' Church 20	The first wooden church was built here as early as in 1093. The current one is a stop on the pilgrimage road to Compostela.
Graslei & Korenlei 22	Starting in the 11th century, trade was booming here on the banks of the river Lys. This became the city's most important port.
St Michael's Bridge 23	This stone bridge crossing the Lys river is the most popular spot in Ghent for photographers and romantic souls.
St Michael's Church 24	This Gothic church houses work by Anthony Van Dyck. And the tower? It was never built. A scale model is displayed at STAM.
St Nicholas' Church 25	This church in Scheldt Gothic style seems to guard Korenmarkt. Can you find the two works of art on the square?
Roeland Bell 26	The alarm bell from 1314 used to hang in the Belfry. Today it has the painting "De Maagd" (the Virgin) by Michaël Borremans for company.
City Pavilion 27	The citizens of Ghent have mockingly named this contemporary pavilion "the sheepfold". It is the setting for many of the city's events.
Masons' Guild Hall 28	The sculptures by Walter De Buck on the stepped gable were supposed to turn with the wind, but they were too heavy.
Belfry 30	An impressive piece of UNESCO world heritage in the heart of the city. The dragon on top of the tower is the symbol of Ghent.
Town Hall 31	The city's political heart. Partly in late Gothic, partly in Renaissance style. Do you see the striking drain-pipe?
Royal Dutch Theatre 32	This theatre is home to the company NTGent. The view from the balcony of the Foyer is sublime.
St Bavo's Cathedral & Ghent Altarpiece 33	This 10th-century cathedral has housed the world-famous Ghent Altarpiece for 6 centuries.
Achtersikkel 34	Surprising little square behind Sint-Baafsplein square. The well used to be a symbol of wealth.
Castle of Gerald The Devil 35	The name and the impressive walls appeal to the imagination. The purpose of the 13th-century castle was to protect the Portus Ganda port.
Reep & Bisdomplein 36	De Reep is a stretch of the river Scheldt in Ghent that was made visible again. Its banks are a great place to relax.
University Auditorium 41	This auditorium of Ghent University dates back to 1826. It has become a symbol throughout the history of Belgium.
Old Law Courts 44	The old courthouse in neo-classical style looks majestic on the waterfront. From here you can admire magical sunsets.
Kouter 46	Stately mansions and shops surround the square. It is the setting for the colourful weekly flower market on Sundays.
St Barbara's Church 48	This Jesuit church was used as a bicycle parking facility for the students of the nearby school. It is currently being restored.
Krook 49	This is not just a municipal library, it's also a meeting place. The designers were awarded the "Nobel Prize for Architecture".
Arts Centre Vooruit 51	This building served as the headquarters of the socialist movement 150 years ago. Today it's a dynamic cultural centre.

Do :

LONELY PLANET

Discover :

Do you feel like discovering more of Ghent after the basic walk? In that case, we suggest 5 shorter walks. Choose one and set off for another discovery!

For romantics 2 km – 35 min — — —

From the Donkere Poort (Dark Gate) to the Bridge of Imperial Pleasures, the entire Prinsenhof district breathes the heritage of the Holy Roman Emperor Charles V. You will also pass Lievekaai, the favourite spot of lovers in Ghent.

For epicureans 500 meters – 7.5 min ★ ★ ★ ★

Patershol used to be the poorest and most dangerous district of Ghent. Today, it's the most enjoyable and gastronomic neighbourhood! Lose yourself in the narrow pedestrian alleys and enjoy the mix of restaurants, authentic pubs and trendy bars.

For creative minds 500 meters – 7.5 min ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Do you feel like expressing your creativity? The Werregarenstraat – called graffiti street by the locals – is your canvas. Beginners and experienced artists alike are free to create a work of graffiti art. There's only 1 rule: respect the works that are better than yours. visitgent.be/streetart

For artists 3,5 km – 45 min ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A neighbourhood where art lovers belong and students come home to. Don't forget to look up! The bronze sculpture "The man who measures the clouds" by Jan Fabre (on the roof of S.M.A.K.) does the impossible.
